Moving to the field!

The last two months have been the most busy months since we started deputation three years ago. It felt like as if everything happened in a flurry. In September, we moved to our house in Philadelphia, then a week afterwards we headed to a missions conference, then came back home. Another week passed, we then started a traveling spree where we had six more missions conference in the month of October alone. During this time, we traveled to meetings in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, and New Hampshire.

Moving Day

It was hard to believe that this day had finally arrived, after three years of raising support, we have made it into the field. We had six of our supporting churches come out and help us with moving, two near our home in MD, and four near the field, totaling about forty five people. That really helped us streamline the moving process.

Packing the truck only took a few hours and unloading only took an hour!

My family also came and helped with the unloading, it was a great testimony to them to see God's people helping out each other.

On top of that, our next door neighbor (we moved into a duplex), has been praying for Christians to move in. Turns out that she attends a nearby independent baptist church and got a missionary as her neighbor! She was able to take care of our cat when we traveled to our missions conferences. We're very grateful to God for even taking care of the small details of our lives before we recognize that we need them.

Missions Conference after Missions Conference

As mentioned, we visited six missions conferences in the month of October. We were not trying to schedule like that but the more we traveled, the more people contacted us for meetings. That is definitely a new experience for us. When we first started out, we were pretty much unknown and now others are asking us to come. At this point, we're not actively seeking more meetings since we believe that our upcoming meetings should be able to help us reach full support. Even with that, our schedule is still filling up as phone calls come in. It's really amazing to see what happens when you let God do the work. Those missions conferences were certainly wonderful experiences and I have learned a lot from them. By the time we were done, we were happily exhausted as we finally settled into our new home at the end of the month.

Deaf Church Plant Update

As stated in our last prayer letter, we're planning to start our deaf church next year. After prayer, careful consideration, and advice from several church planters, we're planning to start the church in May. Our current tentative date for the grand opening is May 1st. We will use this coming winter time to lay up the groundwork for the new church and give in person reports to our supporting churches. If you want us to come and give an update in person, please contact me.

Support Update

Since our last update, our support went up from 88% to 89%. While this may not seem to be much, we're still waiting for the fruits of our latest meetings. We might start seeing more support come in late this year or early next year.

Prayer Requests

- For our support to continue to increase
- For us as we begin laying the groundwork for starting the new deaf church
- For us as we search for a location of a meeting place

-Thank you!!
